Magda and Olek decided to wed on a lovely spring afternoon of April 28th, 2012. The theme of their big day was inspired by Marie Antoinette along with the bride's favourite colours: pink and gold. The event was an epitome of luxury, beauty and originality.

The ceremony took place at the gorgeous St Paul's Basilica in Toronto just steps away from the Berkeley Church Event Venue where the reception was to follow. The entire church aisle was flanked by gold draped candle stands with stunning floral arrangements of pink peonies, roses, commercial mums and hydrangeas.

The bride walked down the aisle in a custom gown made of hundreds of yards of ivory tulle and pleated silk as she carried a large bouquet of pink peonies and garden roses. She opted to give her bridesmaids pomander balls made of coral peonies as an alternative to handheld bouquets. The groom's suit was a silver Dolce & Gabbana stunner matched perfectly by his groomsmen's gray tuxes.

Immediately after the ceremony, guests walked over to an enchanted cocktail reception which took place in the basement and the court yard of Berkeley Church. A pond full of floating candles and flowers as well as hanging lanterns greeted guests as they made their way to the soiree. As guests mingled and enjoyed cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, the happy couple along with their bridal party, went to take photos in the most unusual of places – an abandoned warehouse – which proved to be the perfect background for a striking wedding photo shoot.
